The coat is made on the same idea.

Colors and patterns in fall fabrics present an unusual variety, and many different weaves and textures are offered. Tans, browns, and grays in various shades, as well as blues in pattern weaves.

WOODWARD & LOTHROP.

HEART and HOME TALKS by Barbara Boyd

Just how much one should do for one's relations-in-law or endure from them is a problem many a husband and wife wrestle with. To the husband, of course, his folks are all right; and so, to the wife, are hers. But when each is looked at from the in-law point of view, the aspect is not always so satisfactory. While relations-in-law are merely occasional visitors the problem is not complex. But if they undertake to interfere in family affairs, or wish to become a part of the family, the matter becomes one for serious consideration.

A correspondent has just such a problem on his hands. A sister-in-law with one child has come to live in his home. She has left her husband, or rather her husband has left her, has nowhere to go, and his wife has offered her and her child a home. He is a workman, he says, and can ill afford such an increase in the family. But he does not object so much to this as to the sister-in-law herself. She is, to him, not a pleasant person, has little and is really spoiling the happiness of his home. He has told his wife he does not want the sister-in-law there permanently. But she sides with her sister, which only causes more friction. He doesn't know exactly what to do.

How happy life would be if every one would do as he ought to! Here is a happy home, the result of the husband's hard work and the wife's good management. He does not mind the work, since it results in this pleasant, useful home. In comes a sister-in-law, however, and all is changed. It is little wonder he resents it. When a woman is in trouble she naturally turns first to her own people for help. It is also only natural that they should assist her in any way they can. The sister could scarcely do less than offer a home to the deserted wife and child. But the question is, should she continue to offer a home in opposition to her husband's wishes?

It scarcely seems right that she should. In these days any woman can earn her living if she will go about it pluckily and persistently, and this deserted wife, when she has gathered herself together, can no doubt support herself and child. It may not be an easy matter. But she should not shrink it, or try to shift the burden on some one else's shoulders.

The man is perfectly right in the position he has taken and his wife should not oppose him. He works to provide the home, and she should not ask him to support two others capable of supporting themselves. It was right and kind to give them temporary shelter and aid, but if they persistently stay they should be told politely and firmly by the man that he can no longer support them. If he were wealthy and could afford it, he might give them means to live on, since they are undesirable in his home. But in this case even this could not be expected of him.

His wife and comfort should come first with his wife. Instead of her sister-in-law, especially as the sister herself makes no effort to do those things in the home which he wishes. This wife is very foolish to let her sister ruin the happiness of her home. Not only should her husband's wishes be first with her, but she should remember that it is his wages that provide the home's maintenance, and since her sister is perfectly capable of working, the brother-in-law is not called upon in any way to support her.

The sister-in-law should be told kindly, but very firmly, just how matters stand, and the wife is very foolish if she obstinately refuses to insist that her sister seek a home elsewhere. If she persists in opposing her husband's wishes, she may be herself in the same condition as her sister in a few years. Even the best of husbands will not endure all things.

MRS. CRAMER IS ENJOINED.

Justice Barnard yesterday enjoined Mrs. Laura R. Cramer from disposing of any notes or property acquired by her from the $27,000 which she says Fenton J. Hurd gave her for services as a nurse. She is accused of getting $40,000 from Hurd by alleged "spirit communications" from his dead wife.

Mrs. Cramer and her codefendant, the Washington Loan and Trust Company, are cited to show cause why receivers should not be appointed to take over the notes of C. E. Hopkins and Katherine Miller, aggregating $10,000, and the notes of Clarence Pettit, amounting to $2,000.

The order and citation are based on a complaint made by Dr. L. M. Hurd of Greenwich, Conn., who is conservator of his father's estate. It was filed by Attorneys E. Gordon Pierce, Wallace D. McLean, and Richard A. Ford.

MRS. HITT TO RETURN SOON

Miss Bena Preston Davis the Bride of Prof. Paul Noble Peck—Home Prettily Decorated—French Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand Return to City—Gen. Porter to Close Villa.

Mrs. Russell Harrison and daughter, Miss Martha Harrison, have gone to Omaha, where Mrs. Harrison's mother, the widow of former Senator Saunders, is ill. Mrs. Saunders is improving slowly, and Mrs. Harrison and her daughter will return here October 1.

The home of Mrs. R. R. Hitt, widow of Representative Hitt, of Illinois, is being put in readiness for her return this month. Mrs. Hitt has been abroad since early in the summer. She has spent some time in Europe with Mrs. and Miss Elkins.

Miss Rena Preston Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Powell Davis, and Prof. Paul Noble Peck were married last evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, 2121 First street. The Rev. Walter Drum, S. J., professor of Hebrew at the Jesuits' College at Woodstock, Md., performed the ceremony in the presence of a large company of relatives and friends.

Miss Florence Newcomb Davis was maid of honor for her sister and Mr. Harry H. Campbell was the best man. Mr. William W. Chance and Mr. James Frederick Peake were ushers. They formed an aisle with broad white ribbons, through which the bride party passed. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white tulle crepe and chiffon, heavily embroidered with pearls, and trimmed with point lace. She wore a tulle veil held with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses.

The maid of honor was in pink satin and chiffon, embroidered with pearls and trimmed with lace, and carried a shower of bridesmaid roses. The same roses were entwined in her hair. The wedding music was played by a section of the Marine Band stationed in the corner of the dining-room behind a screen of palms and ferns. The house was prettily decorated in a color scheme of pink and green, the bride party standing during the ceremony in a tall overhanging bower of palms, ferns, and vines, and the mantels being banked with ferns and pink roses. The dining table had a centerpiece of pink roses and cannie shadow of pink silk. After the supper the bride and bridesmaid left for a trip North.

The bride wore a traveling gown of old French blue tulle silk, with a French hat, in green and blue, trimmed with a bird of paradise. The bride's mother wore a beautiful gown of gray chiffon over pink silk, the chiffon elaborately embroidered with pink ribbon roses, a yoke of lace, and lace about the neck completed the costume. Miss Dorothy May Davis, sister of the bride, wore apricot satin, with charmuse of the same shade, gracefully draped over the costume, the charmuse embellished with applied autumn leaves in velvet. The bride's youngest sister, Miss Elizabeth Davis, wore a simple gown of white lingerie.

Mrs. M. L. Garrison, wife of Mr. Garrison, of Front Royal, Va., aunt of the bride, wore a gown of rich wistaria satin. Mrs. Peck, mother of the bridegroom, wore a charming gown of violet crepe de chine, and Miss Edith Peck, sister of the bridegroom, was in an imported lace robe over white silk and chiffon. Miss Nancy Harper, of New Jersey, came down for the wedding, and is the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sully Wheeler.

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

DEAR NIECE JOAN: And so my little girl has decided that she wants to earn her bread and butter and a little cake to go with it instead of having father supply it to her.

Now, Joan, if you hadn't as housewife a little sister as ever took real pleasure in making beds and doing dishes, I'd do my best to discourage you. Right off the reel I'd say, "Why not stay at home and help your mother?"

You see, I've seen so many girls in the business world who would be really earning just as much money and be much better off if they would stay right at home and help their mothers and save the cost of a servant.

The wages and board of a maid and what she wastes, I've been told by good authorities, amount to $8 or $10 and sometimes more, and there are a good many thousand business girls who don't bring in any more than that.

Of course, part of the trouble with that idea is that the girl who stays at home is seldom given any regular wages. When she wants anything, if he feels like it, her father gives her the money, but she doesn't have a feeling of independence that a girl who gets a nice fat little envelope every Saturday noon enjoys.

They had some talk in the papers a little while ago about starting a movement to have men pay their wives regular salaries. I don't believe that would be possible, because to pay a good many married women that I know half what they earn as cook, nursemaid, waitress, seamstress, trained nurse, and in half a dozen other capacities, their husbands would have to turn over the whole of their salaries, and then some.

But I do wish that fathers would get the habit of paying the girls who stay at home and help their mothers as regular a wage as they would the maids whose place they take.

I think it would keep a good many girls out of the business world who don't belong there.

Well, niece, that's quite far afield from what I started to say, which was that as long as you had a sister who liked housework better than you do, and who could help your mother all that was necessary, I wouldn't forbid the bans with your new sweetheart—a business career.

Will I write you some advice from my store of experience? What a ridiculous request, niece.

That is the one thing that everybody likes to give and nobody wants to receive.

You know perfectly that you'd have to disable my typewriter or put my arms out of commission to keep me from deluging you with it. And that wouldn't do any good, because then I'd take to dictating.

Of course I know you only ask to flatter me, and I'm glad of it, Joan. A good brain and a fund of common sense are the first two requisites for business success, but the third is being able to manage people, and I'm glad you evidently have that ability, even if you do use it on Your Gullible Old Aunt.

P. S. On second thought I think I'll place the ability to manage people second.

P. P. S. Or, maybe, first.

CUTTER FOR AERO COURSE.

Will Patrol Dorchester Bay During Squantum Aviation Meet.

Senator Lodge's request for the revenue cutter Gresham to be detailed for duty at Squantum, Mass., during the aviation meet, which will continue until September 12, was granted yesterday. Senator Lodge wired the department that the field in which trials are being held just into the waters of Dorchester Bay and the course follows the shore line.

From the fact that boats are gathering in large numbers, it was thought advisable to have a cutter patrol the course in order to reduce the danger from accident to a minimum.
